Awarded: Silver Star

Date action: 9 Nevember 1966 Theater: Republic of Vietnam

Reason: Callantry in action: Platoon Sergeant Clemons' unit was given the mission of blocking the escape of a known North Victnamese Aray battalion, while other elements of the battalion moved in to encircle the enemy area. While moving into position, Sergeant Clemons' unit made contact with a North Vietnacese Army "Trail Natcher". Realizing that the enomy had been alcred to the fact that American forces were in the area, Sergeant Clemons quickly maneuvered his men forward to find the main enemy body before it could escape. After moving a short distance, Sergeant Clemons' section suddenly came under intense enemy fire from sixteen well fortified enemy positions. With complete disregard for his own safety, Sergeant Clemons quickly reorganized his section and led it in an assault on the enemy positions. Sergeant Glemons moved from flank to flank directing the attack and also the redistribution of ammunition. On one occasion, Sergeant Cloners persomally moved into an exposed area and carried a wounded man to safety and rendered the needed medical aid. Several times during the battle, the energy fire became so intense that small elements of Sergoant Clemons' section became pinned down. Screent Clemons immediately moved to the men and led them to safer positions, then personally assaulted a machine gun position, knocking it out with a hand trenade, killing one energy soldier and wounding another. After the rachine gun position had been destroyed, Sergeant Clemons continued to maneuver his section in a successful assault. Sergeant Clarons' outstanding display of leadership and his gallantry in action are in the highest military tradition and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army,
